

Call for Encryption Advocates to Participate in the Council.

DNS Africa Media and Communications with its partners is calling for Encryption Advocates to participate in a new council that will train stakeholders about encryption.

Encryption is essential for protecting our privacy and security in the digital age. It is used by individuals, businesses, and governments to protect their data from unauthorized access.

However, many people still do not understand what encryption is or how it works. This lack of understanding can lead to bad policies and decisions that can put our privacy and security at risk.

DNS Africa Media and Communications with its partners is committed to educating stakeholders about encryption. We believe that everyone should have the knowledge they need to protect their data and their privacy.

To that end, we are forming a new council of encryption advocates. The council will be responsible for developing and delivering training programs for stakeholders across Africa.

We are looking for encryption advocates who may have any of the following qualifications:

- Expertise in encryption technology.
- Experience in teaching or training others.
- Passion for educating others about encryption.

Benefits of Participating in the Council

- Make a difference in the fight to protect privacy and security.
- Help to educate legislators and students about encryption.
- Gain valuable experience in teaching and training others.
- Network with other encryption advocates.

How to Apply

To apply, please send an expression of interest to [email address] by [date]. Your expression of interest should include:
